THE GAP TODAY

The portal equips agents — but doesn't manage their clients

Agents are trained, with listings and tools in one place. Yet their actual book of business still lives in phone contacts, spreadsheets, and memory.

Leads scattered

Contacts split across phone, email, and notes — no single view.

Slow follow-up

Most deals are lost to missed or late follow-ups.

No pipeline view

Hard to see which deals are hot or stalling.

No broker insight

The brokerage can't see team pipeline or response times.

We already own the agent's daily login. Adding a CRM makes the portal indispensable.

Each page is tied to a listing or pre-con project; submissions create a contact + deal and trigger an instant AI reply — extending the portal's existing worksheet capture.

A visual deal pipeline — drag, drop, done

Stages are admin-editable — the same control pattern as the portal's pre-con statuses.

Every interaction, on one timeline

The interface is a dark-themed window with a light gray sidebar on the left and a main content area on the right. The sidebar contains a contact profile for 'Priya & Sam', a buyer, first-time. It lists their budget ($520k-$580k), area (Oakville), source (Capture page), and an AI score of 98 (Hot). Below this are three tags: 'Pre-con', 'Mortgage ready', and 'Weekend tours'. The main content area displays a timeline of interactions, each with a colored dot, a title, a description, and a timestamp.

Pipeline health for agents and the brokerage

WHY IT'S LOW-RISK

Built on the portal we already run

- ✓ Same React + TypeScript + Tailwind front end
- ✓ Same Postgres database with per-agent security
- ✓ Same Express server for email, AI calls & webhooks
- ✓ Reuses the calendar, calculators & email settings
- ✓ No new vendor lock-in — the brokerage owns all data

New data, cleanly scoped

Contacts, deals, stages, activities, tasks, templates, capture pages, campaigns & documents — each agent sees only their own book; admins get the brokerage roll-up.
